Iditarod Reading Challenge

This year the students will be racing against the mushers during the Iditarod up in Alaska...well sort of!

The challenge is to reach “Nome” at sometime during the actual race. In order to do this, each student will be keeping track of the number of pages read at home and school during the Iditarod. The Iditarod officially begins on March 4 (Sunday), so this will begin on March 4 as well. Each morning, students will calculate the total number of pages read from the previous day and move their marker accordingly on our Iditarod map.

In order to make this a little more fair, I am asking parents to initial their child’s reading log each night when they read. If there are no initials, those pages will not count! Also, each page read will be worth 2 miles on the trail.

Please let me know if you have any questions or concerns at brookss@capetigers.com

Mr. Brooks